Northcom acquires Finnish tech company Portalify

Northcom keeps expanding, and on April 1st 2022, Portalify officially became a part of Northcom.

Established in 2000 and located in Helsinki, Finland, Portalify has since 2013 been a part of Sepura. Experts in critical communication software and applications, their solutions increase operational efficiency and security for public safety, military, and commercial customers.

Portalify's strong customer portfolio includes public safety agencies and network operators in Europe who use the company's operator grade command and control, location, and asset tracking applications for their TETRA and broadband networks. The solutions, which are entirely developed in Finland are designed with next generation public safety network and services in mind which will benefit Northcom's current and future customers.

"With the geopolitical challenging environment and instability Europe is facing, Northcom positions themselves even better with the acquisition of Portalify – showcasing the increasing investment in defence and security. By introducing Portalify and its expertise and knowledge to Northcom's portfolio, Northcom will improve and strengthen their position across Scandinavia and expand beyond the Nordic countries in Europe. With this investment in Portalify, Northcom will increase its capacity of developing software."

- Morten Stomperud, CEO Northcom

"Applications continue to drive operational efficiencies for PMR users, so I am delighted that Northcom is making this strategic investment in Portalify at such an exciting time. I look forward to continuing our close relationships with Northcom and Portalify as we combine our strengths to develop market-leading solutions that enhance users' safety, improve outcomes, and deliver operational efficiencies through the sharing of data."

- Steve Barber, CEO Sepura.

Northcom is located across the Nordic countries: Denmark, Sweden, Norway, and Finland and provides critical communication solutions for a better and more secure society.
